Sweet is the carol of a bird When warbling on the spray,
And beautiful the moon's pale beam
That lights us on our way;
Yet lovelier friendship's look and word
Than moonlight or than warbling bird.

How prized the coral and the shell, And valued, too, the pearl; Who can the hidden treasures tell O'er which the soft waves curl?

I would suggest, for the benefit of persons engaged in that operation, a plan which I have successfully adopted for the last two seasons. And without supposing it new (although it is not the one usu ally recommended in books) I will describe it and drangement of the Mails at the Washington Post its advantages over the common cleft-grafting. 1 have no doubt it is described among Mr. Thomas' fifty methods; but never having seen those, and supposing a majority of grafters in the like predicament, I am induced to give it publicity.

This system, however, only applies to tree half an inch or more in diameter. For smaller stocks and roots, whip-splice and cleft-grafting stocks and roots, whip-splice and cleft-grafting are preferable. In consequence of the numerous mistakes of nursery men from whom I have purchased trees, after fruiting a large portion of my apples and pears, I have been induced to regraft many, which I did in the usual way, (by cleft-grafting) and having regularly lost about thirty-three per cent. by the wind blowing them out, after making a fine, vigorous growth of more than two feet, I came to the conclusion that I must adopt some other method, which I have tried for the last two seasons without having a single one blown out. I saw off the limb or stock square across, and pare it smooth, the same as for cleft-grafting, without splitting the stock, but merely the bark, one-half or three-fourths of an inch down, on one or more sides according to the number of the bark, one-half or three-fourths of an inch down, on one or more sides according to the number of grafts which I wish to insert, and after preparing the scion or graft, taking as usual three buds; though when they have been scarce I have used only two, and in several instances only one successfully. Cut the graft diagonally across, with a slope of about an inch long, then with the point of the knife open the bark at the top of the slit sufficiently to introduce the cut point of the graft, push it gently down until no more of the cut porof the knife open the bark at the top of the slit sufficiently to introduce the cut point of the graft, push it gently down until no more of the cut portion is visible, tie up or wax in the usual way, and the operation is finished; at the end of the season of growth you will find that your graft has grown firmly to the side, being almost as strong as any other lateral shoot; and, if you put two or three in, by the end of the second or third season the whole top of the stock, if not too large, will be covered by the callus, and look perfectly natural; whereas cleft-grafting, owing to the split in the stock, never fills up; moisture gets in, which, producing disease, ultimately causes the tree, frequently when it has attained full growth, to split and break down. I have lost no less than four out of a row of ten fine twelve-year old Belleflour apple trees this last season which were grafted five feet from the ground in the old way. As a covering for the graft, I always use cheap muslin dipped in hot grafting wax, cut into strips from one-half to one inch wide; it saves tieing and time, and is much neater.

A scion can be inserted on the side of any limb and is much neater.

A scion can be inserted on the side of any limit by opening the bark in the same way as for budding, or a graft neatly fitted into a gimlet hole on any part of a stock or limb will answer equally well; in fact, it is a beautiful method when you the sake of symmetry.

MARCH 10, 1853.

The undersigned has practised bud or bark grafting upwards of eight or ten years successfully, and has never seen but one blown off by storms, which originated from a shoot growing up by the graft, and robbing it of nourishment to perfect the union of the bark. He has engrafted on smaller and larger sizes, than are described in the above letter, apple, pear, plum, and apricot.

had a thought of the beautiful world about, or the sky above them. The mother was tall, thin, and clothed in ragged calico, and her sunken eyes glared an expression, that seemed to be habitual, of complete hopelessness. The father, at the moment our eye caught the group, had entered the apartment stultified with liquor, but with the ferocity of a wild beast depicted on his bloated and discolored features. For some foolish cause, no doubt, he was enraged at one of his children, and while it crouched like a helpless purp in a corner. doubt, he was enraged at one of his children, and while it crouched like a helpless pup in a corner, the monster was endeavoring to throw what had been a chair at it; and was only prevented by the weak hand of his wife desperately grasping his wrist from executing his devilish purpose. We paused, and, he happening to see us, the chair was lowered, and we passed on sick at heart.

How many such scenes, and more terrible ones, are daily and nightly witnessed only by the allseeing One in this great town? Not on earth will that question be answered. Do young men who riot in dissipation, and rejoice to be esteemed "fast," reflect that their habits foreshadow Drunkards' Homes for themselves and posterity?

GREAT THROUGH LINE TO THE WEST.

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, from Baltimore to Wheeling, and connecting there with the large, new, and splendid Steamers of the Union Line on the Ohio, and the Stages to Zanesville, &c.

Union Line on the Ohio, and the Stages to Zanesville, &c.

This expeditious Line being now the roughly completed, by the late finishing of the Great Board Tree Tunnel, and the road being in excellent order, the earnest attention of travellers is confidently directed to its superior advantages and low fares. The scenery upon this road is of the most stupendous and attractive character. The Express Mail Train leaves Baltimore daily at 7 p. m., and runs directly through to Wheeling (380 miles) in 18 or 19 hours, including all stoppages, arriving there at 2 or 3 p. m. next day; or, passengers leaving Baltimore at 8 a. m. may lay over for lodging in Cumberland, (179 miles,) and proceed thence to Wheeling in the morning.

To connect with these trains, the cars leave Washington at 6 a. m. and 5 p. m. daily, meeting the cars from Baltimore at the Washington Junction, (better known as the Relay House,) 9 miles from Baltimore.

At Wheeling the seven unrivalted steamers of the Union Line, which have just been completed for this route, form a daily connexion with the cars, and convey passengers down the Ohio to Cincinnati and Louisville, where the stages for Nashville, &c., or the St. Louis and New Orleans packets may be taken by those going further on.

Passengers for Columbus (or who prefer the land route to Cincinnati) and other paris of Ohio and the West may also proceed direct from Wheeling in the Ohio Stage Company's excellent coaches over the best part of the National Road to Zanesville, &c., and thence by filinad.

Passengers for Wellsville and Cleveland by steamboat and railroad will also find this a most agreeable route, there being a regular and speedy connexion at Wheeling to and from those places.

(9-Baggage checked through from Washington to Wheeling, and no charge for transfer of passengers or baggage.

Fare by through ticket (with the right to lie over anywhere on the route) from Washington
